

From Our Green Business Network™:

Our Members Represent the Small-Green-Business Perspective on the Healthcare Debate

When President Obama gave his speech on October 29 to small business leaders, the White House wanted representatives of Green America's Green Business Network there.

Aric Caplan, of Caplan Communications in Rockville, MD, and Michael Hindle of Brennan+Company Architects in Baltimore attended on behalf of Green America.

“As part of Green America, small business owners represent a critical link in sustainable practices. And, President Obama truly gets it by acknowledging the undue healthcare burden on us during the news conference,” reports Aric. “He said we are on the leading edge of the change. Besides, I think any successful rebound of the U.S. economy would have been incomplete without hearing our voices.”

“I would agree with Aric's comments,” says Michael. “The president made a solid, point by point argument for why health care reform is obviously a benefit to small businesses. I did my best to express the progressive business community's support both to the President and to other folks in attendance.”

Big thanks to Aric and Michael for representing Green America.

reprinted from http://www.greenamericatoday.org/emails/canews/20091112/

